“There’s an infinite amount of wealth in the world for me to attract and to spend. My wealth attraction and accumulation is a subtraction for no one. I freely take money from anyone and everyone who will give it to me or pay it to me. Wealth is uncontrollably attracted to me and gives itself up to me, wholly, completely and on a consistent basis.

Nothing is too expensive for me to buy. I’m free to spend money on anything I want because I attract money from an unlimited source of wealth and abundance. When I pull out my debt card or when I pay for something online, I’m testifying to my wealth attraction power and to my power to buy anything I want.

I enjoy the company and the influence of wealthy people. I enjoy the power and the luxury of being wealthy. No amount of money is too much for me to demand, to give, to spend or to accept. Deserving is unrelated to my ability to attract money. I attract as much money as I want through skillful and positive intimidation.

Money obeys my deliberate and intentional ability to attract it by means of what I think, what I say, what I do and what I compel other to do. People are happy and confident to give me money and I cheerfully accept it. My ability to demand and to attract wealth is far greater than all of my talents and abilities.

As an entrepreneur, I’m responsibility committed to selling products and services in order to profit from the needs, desires, indulgences, the ignorance and the misfortune of others whenever the opportunity presents itself. Money is available in an unlimited supply and easily replaceable when lost.

Money is attracted to me because I take responsibility instead of taking cover, because I make decisions instead of making excuses and because I refine and innovate instead of complaining and criticizing. Money is attracted to me because I accept responsibility for everything that happens to me, even the things I have no control over.

I attract money quickly and easily and in large quantities through my skills as an entrepreneur. I attract money not because I hard work hard, but I attract money because of my use of skillful intimidation and creative innovation.

I attract money because of how I consistently speak and feel about earning and spending money. I attract money because of my expert status and authority as a teacher of the skills, strategies and principles of entrepreneurship. Wealth is attracted to me because I consistently position myself in places where I can connect with new clients and form powerful mastermind alliances.

I boldly ask for any information, contacts, referrals, ideas and introductions required to promote my plans for attracting money. I attract the cooperation of others and create money attraction momentum by dominoing and optimizing every opportunity and every resource that comes my way.

I attract money because I create and market products and services which meet deep and desperate human needs. I have a gift for spotting opportunity within a market by finding human needs which are unmet by the products and services currently being offered by my competitors.

My wealth attraction power transcends geographical boundaries. I attract money because I respect money and because I connect with and influence those who can help me to get it. Money is attracted to me because of my independence, my innovation, and my capacity for positive intimidation.

My financial independence comes not from my net worth or even from my current income, but from my intrinsic ability to attract money. Money is attracted to me because I respond to my inner voice of creativity, innovation and drive instead of responding to outer circumstances and to the opinions of others.

My wealth attraction power is magnified by what I know, who I know, by my reputation as an expert, and by my ability to focus all my energy only on the most high value activities.

Money is attracted to be because of my creative innovation, my ability to build relationships with and to command respect from high status people and because of my ability to find hidden opportunities by seeing what others don't see.

I attract money because of my ability to build wealth by establishing trust with prospects, customers, business partners, by creating high value connections with influential people and by creating products, brands, systems and services which make money again and again and again.

I attract money because I use creative innovation to consistently magnify the cash production capability of the products, brands, systems and services which I use to execute my plans for attracting wealth.

I attract money through unabashed, unashamed, irrepressible promotion of ideas, brands, products and services and through positive intimidation. Money is naturally attracted to me because I embrace and apply beliefs, behaviors and habits which will naturally attract money, and when I do, the results take care of themselves.

Money is attracted to me because I take consistent and decisive action towards my ideas and plans for attracting it. The moment I act on an idea for attracting money, I set an immediate magnetic force in motion, a force which attracts all the people, opportunities, resources and money required grow and to refine my idea and to make it a reality.

I achieve extraordinarily high productivity by working entirely protected from interruptions. I attract money because I start strong, and because I finish stronger. I attract money because I build greater value and trust during my fulfillment of a service than I do during the selling and marketing of that service. I attract money because I make and keep promises to clients and to business partners.

I attract money because I invest my time, money, energy and creativity only into high value tasks, wealth producing assets and high value relationships. I attract money because I associate and ally myself with people who support my passion for attracting wealth, happiness and good health and because I avoid people who would try to extinguish that passion.

I attract money because I have zero tolerance for mediocrity and BS. I have the courage to take immediate action on an idea to attract wealth in spite of circumstances and in spite of the opinions of others.

I attract money because I surround myself with beauty, style and excellence and because I can describe even the most complicated ideas within 10 seconds or less

My life is a demonstration of power, affluence and happiness which I achieve through the application of the personal and professional principles and strategies that I teach. I conduct business and live life entirely on my terms, associating with who I want and doing business where I want, when I want and how I want.

I can feel money coming to me before it arrives and I gladly welcome it and put it to immediate use towards attracting even greater wealth.

There's a rhythm to making money which something inside me responds to. Money also responds to a distinct rhythm, momentum and vibration within my body. I can feel when I'm creating this rhythm, momentum and vibration and the more I create and magnify it, the more money I attract.
